John Adams Kern, D. D., LL. D.

R. JOHN ADAMS KERN was born April 23, 1846, on his father's farm, one mile from Winchester, Va. He was educated at the University of Virginia, under inspiring teachers like Dr. McGuffey. He entered the ministry at the age of eighteen and continued in the active pastorate until he was forty years of age.

He was elected the Professor of Moral Philosophy and Biblical Literature in Randolph-Macon College in 1886. He was Vice-President of the College from 1893 to 1897, and President from 1897 to 1899, when he was elected to the Professorship of Practical Theology in Vanderbilt University, where he remained until 1914. He then returned to Randolph-Macon to become Professor of Christian Institutions and Service.

In 1875 he married Miss Margaret Virginia Eskridge, daughter of Rev. Alfred A. Eskridge, and their children are, Leroy Eskridge Kern, of New York, an architect and member of the Editorial Staff of The Journal of The American Institute of Architects; Alfred A. Kern, Professor of English at Randolph-Macon Woman's College; Paul Bentley Kern, Dean of The Theological Department of the Southern Methodist University, and Katrina Kern, wife of Rev. Jesse Martin Ormond, Professor in the Southern Methodist University.

Dr. Kern holds the degree of D. D. from Washington and Lee University and of LL. D. from Randolph-Macon College. He has been a member of several General Conferences. He served on the first Commission appointed by the General Conference to establish standards for our educational institutions.

He is the author of the following books: The Ministry to the Congregation; The Way of the Preacher; The Idea of the Church; The Listening Heart; Vision and Power; Christianity as Organized. Dr. Kern is a preacher who gives you the result of all his intellectual and spiritual processes. The subject is carefully analyzed, but the skeleton of thought is clothed with flesh and blood of feeling and emotion, and there is always a play of imagination around the subject that suggests the poet and the prophet. I have met men who recall Dr. Kern's sermons that were preached a generation ago. They can give the outline of the discourses and you can catch from the impression left on the hearer something of the spiritual and imaginative qualities of the sermons.

Dr. Kern's greatest influence on his generation has been made as a teacher and a writer. As a teacher he shows a mastery of his subject, and he insists, his students have always thought with too great insistence, on their mastering the subject also.

As a writer he shows not only the keen intellect of the scholar, but a lucidity and a charm of expression that few scholars have. Only recently a leader in our Church said that Dr. Kern's "Christianity as Organized," by its scholarship and research and its masterly presentation of the facts, will take its place with the productions of the great writers of Protestantism on ecclesiastical subjects.

But the man is greater than his writings, and daily intercourse with Dr. Kern reveals many phases of mind and heart that might escape a reader of his books. He is not only a theologian, he is a well rounded man, he is a lover of good literature, a lover of nature and he has a rich vein of quiet humor.

Those who have sat under him at Randolph-Macon and at Vanderbilt will bear the impress of his character throughout their lives, and his books will cause his influence on the Church to be felt long after his scholars shall have passed to where beyond these voices there is peace.

This Annual is dedicated to him as a slight token of the admiration, gratitude, esteem and love of those who more recently have come within the range of his influence.

-ROBERT EMORY BLACKWELL.

UR task, for the most part a pleasurable one, is completed!

We have striven, to the best of our ability, to depict the multifarious activities of the year. You, as students, have played the role of model and if the picture is lacking in any respect, bear with us the censure.

We publish this book, neither seeking commendation nor offering apologies—It is the result of honest effort, and we offer it merely for what it is, and for what it may be in the years to come.

Alma Mater

XTRACTS from an address delivered before the society of alumni, June 14, 1921, by Hon. Patrick Henry Drewry, '96:

Every brick in every building on this Campus, if the truth were known, was laid with a prayer, and with the unselfish love of many men, doing their life work—not in piling up riches, but in the upbuilding of character in the education of the men sitting at their feet, and in the shaping of the lives of the boys under their instruction, who would later on become foundation stones in the development of their country. . . .

After all what does a man get out of his college life? He gets, first, a training in how and where to find the thought of the Past. No one would say that the scholastic work of a man in college makes his reputation. His fame rests upon his own endeavor long after he has forgotten his college studies. Secondly, and this is more important, he gets the force of example of the men to whom he looks for that training. The boy may not remember what he was taught, but he can tell you until his dying day a thousand things about his teacher. Then he gets the association with his fellows, all striving for the same goal, under the same tutorship. These last two make the "atmosphere" of the college—that indefinable thing that in after years produces men who bring credit upon the College, and who show their appreciation of their training by their loyalty to the old mother who fostered them when they needed care.

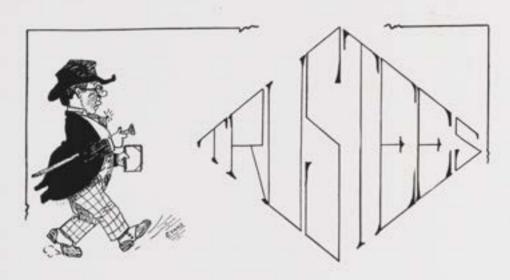

Youthful follies are reprehensible, but as Scott says, aged men gladly forego the vanities of life to count them over, until memory fails to lend her light in recalling them. "A little learning is a dangerous thing" to entrust to a college boy, and "the doubts and cares and caution of age" are not with him as brakes on a slippery hill. Thank God they are not. Better far the yielding to the reckless impulses of youth than to the infirmities of age swayed only by a thirst for power and riches. There is not an alumnus of this College or any other college who would not give his distinctions, his honors, his powers, or his wealth, to be set down once more upon his College Campus with his life before him and the confident spirit of youth to "get in the game" once more, and once more fight the glorious battle that leads up the heights to victory. It is the contest, not the attainment, that is the joy of life.

The purpose of the College is to equip men for this battle of Life. College training gives a view of the Past that enables the student to meet the Present. When the College fails in this, then there is no further necessity for collegiate training. There is already a tendency to belittle the rounded curriculum of a college course. Men are saying that the best education is along industrial and commercial lines learned in the School of Experience; that we need more farmers, more artisans, more mechanics; that we must rely on them to develop the resources of our country; that the rewards are greater. We are daily becoming more material; less spiritual. There is less of that fine sentiment that is acquired by contact with the great thinkers of other periods. There never was a time when there were more needed, men trained with a knowledge of the past, who will use their knowledge to benefit humanity, to make this world a better place to live in. Never were there more needed men of altruism, of clear vision, of Christian faith. . . .

I know old Randolph-Macon will not fail. She has never failed. Her fame is the fame of the men she has quickened and inspired. Her sons have borne aloft the torch of truth, with manly courage; they have flashed its light into many corners, and always honestly; and they have guided its rays beneficiently, with Christian spirit, as befitted the teaching of those Christian leaders, who sent them forth, bidding them remember "His can't be wrong whose life is in the right." I know they will "carry on," until the shadows cease to fall under these grand old oaks of our beloved Campus.

This old College and its Campus is the dearest spot on earth to many a man whose busy life is spent far away. Here, as a boy, he lightly dreamed of the future; the days were "made of melody." and every note was as "merry and cheerful" as "the mounting lark's." He had not then "spent his wealth and bought the knowledge he would gladly exchange for forgetfulness to live again his dreaming life." In the "soft shadowy days of Autumn," the air he breathed as he ran along the paths that wind through these noble trees sent the blood coursing through his veins like wine; the snows of Winter lay more beautifully on this Campus than elsewhere; and in the languorous Spring time no where was the turf greener, or the air sweeter. The sun-light filtered through the foliage weaving strange patterns on the grass, patterns as fanciful as the dreams of youth. The moonlight played its soft rays in loveliness on this old Campus as never it shone before or since. In after years many a man's memory recurs to a moonlight night on the Randolph-Macon Campus. He shuts his eyes, but yet he sees, or thinks he sees, "The silver light hallowing tree and tower," he hears again sweet strains in the soft stillness of a night in June, and he breathes again the intoxicating perfume of the Essence that is youth. Blessed be the spot that in the disillusioned years can bring back, even in sweetest memory, such a fragrance.

SENIOR CLASS POEM

The highest heights we reach today Since first our upward flight began, The summit reached in four brief years Which seem to us a single span.

We stand together e'er we part, Our paths diverge we know not where, But in our hearts we hold secure, The vows of friendship taken here.

Companionship to us becomes More dear as to the end we move. What joy it is to mingle with The friends and comrades that we love!

Blest were the days that marked our toil! Our labor brought us sweet content, And, struggling through our daily tasks, We felt that life was wisely spent,

Could Time, his flight reversed, restore Those treasured hours we hold so dear— Bring back again those happy days Which vivid to our minds appear?

It would be well, but they are gone. These transient years we'll not forget; And though our college days are past, Their joys will linger with us yet.

These hallowed walls, this chapel aisle, We leave today with fond regret; Our study halls and campus walks, Where toil and duty oft were met.

So, Classmates, we must bid farewell, And though our time has come to part, Our friendship bond shall hold us fast, And love shall dwell in every heart.

Oh! Alma Mater, here to thee Our truest song of thanks we raise. Both hope and vision thou hast given, To make more blest our coming days.

We leave behind these pleasant scenes, So filled with every thought of thee; But deep within our hearts we hold, A shrine of tenderest memory.

Though larger tasks may not be ours, And those we seek we may not find, Yet teach us that each service small, Will have its blessing on mankind!

And teach us as we journey on Life's pleasant path to follow thee, And seek the truth that thou hast taught, The blessed truth that makes us free.

In Baughan we have a student of many accomplishments, a companion to many, an intimate friend to but few, a man interested in all campus activities and a jack of all trades!

He is apparently a queer duck until you really come to know him and then only can one really appreciate his personality. It is like unto a jewel which has been buried in some recess, but when once the outer layer is penetrated, it shines with astonishing brilliance. Baughan has been cursed with the lack of affability, that element in man which brings scores of temporary but few permanent friends. To say that he is outspoken is but to add to his commendable independence.

Until recently Baughan created much disturbance among his companions concerning the probability of his ever being won by womankind. No longer do we doubt, no longer do we fear for him, no longer do we persuade, no longer do we urge upon him the need of acquiring the art of mending socks and sewing buttons on garments—what we really feel like doing is to ask him to drive at a less rapid gait and to ponder well where he shall tie for himself the Gordian knot,

Clarence leaves us with his A. M., having secured it in four years, to face the difficulties of the world, and we can but wish him success in whatever branch of services he chooses, Winner Henry W, Murray Medal for Proficiency, 1919: Monitor Board, 1929-21; Vice-President Junior Chass, 1921; Y, M. C. A. Cabinet, 1921; Vice-President, Y. M. C. A., 1922; Yellow Jacket Annual Staff, 1921; Yellow Jacket Meskly Staff, 1921; Business Manager, Yellow Jacket Annual, 1922; Censor, Frank Hall, 1921; Secretary Frank Hall, 1922; Foothall Tram, 1921-22; Instructor in French, 1921; Instructor in French and Latin, 1922; President Senior Class, 1922; President Student Council, 1922.

During the influenza epidemic, which swept over the campus in the fall of 1918, turning dormitories into hospitals and claiming as its victims hundreds of students, a freshman volunteered to take his place by the sick bed, to nurse unknown men afflicted with a dread disease. Without the necessary medical equipment he served without sleep or relief until a hospital was organized. This man was Herman Bell, and such was his introduction.

Since then, on account of his optimism, his friendliness, his willingness to work at the routine tasks of college life, his ability to see the other fellow's point of view, and his desire for uplift and advancement of college activities, he has constantly risen in the good will of his classmates, who have conferred upon him some of their highest offices of responsibility.

In classes he sparkles, Latin he translates without a pony, instructorships he holds down two at a time. On the athletic field he scraps, in halls he boosts, in the Y. M. C. A. and on the publications he works, and in his daily life on the campus he lives the life of a Christian, a Randolph-Macon man and a gentleman.

His varied and numerous expeditions in the field of the fairer sex have earned for him the cognomen of "Love-bird," and if heart-breaking were a degree requirement, he would be a Ph. D.

We know not in what field of work Herman will direct his talents, but we expect of him a full measure of noble service unselfishly rendered.

To those of us for whom the intricate processes of integration and differentiation have never had any peculiar charm, "Bill" has always been a problem impossible of solution. To our sophomoric protest he turns the cold ear of contempt, and proceeds to wade through Math. I, II, III, and IV in brilliant style. He is in his peculiar element whenever his particular line of endeavor smacks of equations or solutions. Few men have graced the halls of this institution who possessed a keener aptitude for things mathematical than "Uncle Olen".

By what we have said concerning Bill's mathematical ability we do not mean to imply that he is a crank. To coin a trite phrase "Versatility is his middle name." In every class he has seen fit to adorn with his presence, with the single exception of Latin I, he has proven a student of exceptional ability. His favorite sport, tennis, he has pursued with such diligence that he is now reigning singles champion of R. M. C. In the august confines of Frank Hall he has arisen in the steps of honor to the presidency. In town life, for he is a native of Ashland, he is a leader. No minstrel, musical comedy, or farce is complete without him.

As a man he is distinctly characterized by an uncanny way of probing for practical values. He will accept no halfway measures. You make a statement; he fixes upon you a sort of lazy, half-cynical scrutiny, asks you a searching question, and immediately you retract or compromise. As a friend, he is frank, unassuming, true. In whatever field he may choose to spend his life, we know he will prove a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

When the mellow breezes of the fall of 1918 were strewing the autumnal leaves over the brown sods of Randolph-Macon campus there arrived upon the scene this sputtering, twisting fish, whose likeness we now behold under that coveted scholastic lid. Bolen has been known by all as a man. What more need be said?

His work has been of a high style, manifesting an affinity for Economics and Political Science as well as scientific subjects. For his ever sagacious and timely interest in Wash Hall be has been rewarded with all it has to give. Essays, Orations, and all have given ample evidence of his ability in this field. The Hall loses one of her truest sons as Bolen leaves for Schoolfield with his sheepskin under his arm. As Business Manager of the Weekly he has demonstrated his ability to get the shekels from tight advertisers. Should he choose the fair field of business as his life's vocation, success will await his splendid talents.

To know Bolen was to love him; to work with him was ever a pleasure and we feel that his genuine manly qualities will assure his highest success in the affairs of the world.

When "Bevo" first arrived on the campus of Randolph-Macon it was during the regime of the S. A. T. C. He was at that time too young to enlist in the corps, but nevertheless, he requested to be allowed to drill, and his wish was granted.

Bridgforth came here with a fine record for scholarship at the Randolph-Macon Academy at Bedford behind him. But his youth did not hinder him in his classes, as he established another enviable record at his Alma Mater, being one of the two men to survive through Chemistry IV—heights that are attained by only a few. But not only in his studies does he leave this impression behind him. The football team will miss his able work in guard, and the "Old Timers" of baseball can look back to the good old days when "Bevo" was manager.

Intelligent, witty, and loyal, he has made for himself, a fine place in the hearts of those who knew him.

EDWARD GRANVILLE COX, A. B.

Washington Literary Society
Odd, Virginia

When Edward Granville Cox, of Odd, Virginia, first appeared upon the domain of Randolph-Macon four years ago, he was, as others, only listed as "another fish". But now, how times have changed! The erstwhile Freshman has blossomed out into a full-blown, wise and dignified Senior—soon to pass into new phases of life. He, as many before him, has thrown his lot among the pedagogues, at least for the present.

While among us, he was one of Dr. Bowen's Latin IV "twisters" and remained in Mathematics during his entire sojourn—(we do not say which Mathematics!). He was also a member in good standing of Wash Hall.

But, Oh! Heaven pity the broken hearts he leaves behind him. However, we hope that at least one of the victims of his charms will be remembered. Unfailing courtesy, bouyant disposition and a sunny smile!

We call "Whit" a leader; outstanding, clear in thinking, decisive in action, clean in living; yes, a leader. In the esteem of his fellows he stands high, for he is friendly to all, partial to none. On the eleven he showed himself a fighter from whistle to whistle, and boys admire fighters. In Frank Hall he has cut all the known "shines" and probably some more; he has upheld our honor on the forum with marked success. He has edited our weekly to our satisfaction. We listen to his jokes and sayings with interest for they always bear a meaning. With kindness, thoughtfulness, and courtesy he has sealed our friendship.

Oh, no! We haven't forgotten scholarship, for we find him among the foremost there. Medalist, Instructor in English, Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts speak eloquently of his conquests in this field also. While in Ashland his ambition has ever been for Randolph-Macon greatness, and his efforts and loyalty in her behalf merits our devout benediction, "Well done—thou hast been faithful—go to thy reward."

The Tidewater section of the Old Dominion, which has sent so many illustrious sons to grace the halls of Randolph-Macon, added a nother name to her long list in 1918 in the person of "Dave". With a diligence that spoke of high resolve he entered upon his duties as a student, and his graduation finds him esteemed by all of his professors as a sound, consistent student. Nor has he—as many have—sacrificed other fields of college activities to the lure of the midnight oil. A leader in Wash Hall, a sterling center on the quint, and an enthusiastic worker in all phases of progressive student enterprise, he lacks none of the essentials that make for success. To those of us who call him friend he gives the impression of sincerity, dependability, and genuine likeableness. We bid him farewell with reluctance.

Among the fine spirits of the class of '22, "Red", as he was known by his fellows, will ever be remembered as one that R. M. C. can happily call her own. He, after those verdant days of '18, gave his fellow students such assurance of his ability and genuine college spirit that they selected him as their leader in many college activities. Having a natural fondness for Latin, he immediately developed a proclivity to tennis, in which he then outclassed Dr. Bowen.

"Red" lived with us as our leader in Christian, Athletic and Literary activities. His congenial and manly qualities will always win for him the esteem of his fellows and crown his every effort with success.

We know that his life of service will reflect high honor on his Alma Mater and that section of Virginia whose beautiful shores are laved endlessly by many waters.

"New comes the time to speak of many things, cabbages and kings," etc., but most of all, of Porter Hardy. "Portly" was green when he first came under our vision, and possibly his greenness refreshed our tired sight. However, since that time he has matured and ripened until, at the present time, we find an example worthy of copying.

Versatility and efficiency may well be defined as the keynote of the success of our good friend, Porter Hardy. Always cheerful, always with an infinite capacity for work, and always ready to help someone else in their struggles, he has moved through three years of busy, vibrating, and resourceful college life, until now he stands at the goal toward which so many of us strive with varying success.

Porter has been an all round college man, and in his studies he has excelled. Four years of work for the average student has been accomplished easily in three by our Benn's Church wizard. He participates in athletics at every opportunity. He has done a large amount of work in the literary societies, and has been rewarded by them in just proportion.

We are sure that the world holds much in store for Porter, and that Porter has much in store for the world. His many friends wish for him a prosperous and happy future.

JOHN WILLIAM KIRACOFE, A. B.

Franklin Literary Society

Mt. Solon, Virginia

Time-keeper Davidson Inter-collegiate Debate, 1921; Cheer Leader, 1922; Secretary Frank Hall, 1922; Student Council, 1922; Assistant Business Manager Yellow Jacket Annual, 1922.

Right from the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia came John W. (but better known as "Huckleberry") Kiracofe in the fall of '18. A typical mountaineer, you can bet he would have made Uncle Sam a good soldier had he been given the opportunity. Instead, he had to remain satisfied to serve in the S. A. T. C. at R. M. C. until the heartbreaking news that the war was over came, and the boys were mustered out.

From the time "Huckleberry" put his leatherettes on R. M. soil, he became a part of the life of the college period. Effervescing with music from the roots of his hair to the tips of his peddles, his musical accomplishments seemed to permeate everything. He has earned the universal name of "Musical" among the students and also the town people.

As well as being a man of magnetic personality, "Huck" is quite a student, excelling in the languages, especially. He speaks Greek with a fluency which approaches that of Demosthenes. French comes as easy to him as English.

Although not an athlete himself, he has supported the teams with all of his vigor, having been cheer-leader for one year. He has been an energetic worker in his Literary Society for four years.

Old Randolph-Macon is losing a wonderful personage in "Huck", but it consoles itself that it's loss will be the world's gain.

Intelligence has been defined as the ability to apply knowledge—assuming always that there is knowledge to be applied. Three years ago the campus witnessed the arrival of a man endowed in large measure with the first—and eminently fitted by nature for the acquisition of the second of these qualities. Because of a tendency to blush easily this freshman early earned the sobriquet of "Minnie", and "Minnie" he remained, despite his later revelations of many very un"Minnie"-like qualities.

Minnie quickly acquired the reputation of being a star "twister" by the ease with which he wrung 100's from the reluctant pen of Dr. Dolly. Exceptionally high marks became a habit with this young man, so much so, in fact, that he decided to finish the four-year course in three years. This he is doing with characteristic ease.

In writing of a stellar student, there is always danger of leaving the impression that the man is a freak. Honestly, gentle peruser, this is not true of Minnie. One of the freest mixers on the campus, one wonders where he gets time to study for those sky-scraping grades. He has never been known to miss a dance, the reason being obvious after one has overheard some such remark as was recently made by a Richmond "Deb"—"Oh-h! I was so thrilled. Mr. Linthicum dances just like Rudolf Valentino." Girls sometimes exaggerate, but nevertheless, Minnie is pretty loose on his feet.

Seriously, when you say that Minnie is a good student, a good sport on the campus, and a good friend in a pinch, you haven't said the half of it. Here's to you, old-timer, and may you be as much of a success in the future, as a "medico", as you have been in the past, as a student at Randolph-Macon.

ERNEST JACKSON LUCK,

Franklin Literary Society

Ashland, Virginia

Ernest had his college course broken into by the call of his country, and for three years he helped the sons of America make history in France. This year, however, he returned to his work, and June will send him forth again a warrior in another battle—the battle of life. It is hard to speak of these sons of Randolph-Macon without a respectful hesitancy. They have played such a vital, such an absorbing part in world history, that we do not feel like adding our feeble tribute to their glory.

Ernest has the dignity, courage, and soberness of a soldier. As a student he is earnest, diligent, and exact. As a man he is quiet, conservative, likable. As a friend he is wholesouled and generous.

Without seeking to flatter, it is almost impossible to speak of our instructor in Physics. Coming from the fair skies and rich fields across the flowing tides of the Rappahannock, he soon made himself felt as a student. Specializing in science, principally in Physics and Chemistry, he has set records for the emulation of succeeding classes. His work in the Chemical department has been of such a calibre as to win for him the coveted Shepard Chemical Medal, and in Physics he has held the position of instructor for two years. Aside from scholastic attainments, he is gifted in other fields of endeavor, being especially adept in manipulating the heartstrings of the fairer sex. When all is said, we find him an exceptional student, a conscientious worker, a warm supporter of all college activities both as a participant and as an onlooker, and, above all, a sincere and loyal friend. He will live to shed lustre on his Alma Mater.

OSCAR WILLIAM LUSBY, JR. A. B., K Σ, X B Φ, B. L. A. K. I. Washington Literary Society

Most men when they reach college are so bewildered by their sudden projection into a new world that a year must be given up to adapting themselves properly to their surroundings, i, e., to "finding themselves." Such, however, was not the case with Oscar William Lusby. He came to Randolph-Macon with a fixed purpose—to find out what a college man and a chemist should know; he has well attained the first by his four years of association with his fellows, and he will gain the best in his profession, if one may judge from the perseverance he has demonstrated in search for chemical knowledge, which has often kept him in "lab" until the "wee, small hours of the morning."

Oscar came to Randolph-Macon when Uncle Sam had us all doing double-time around the campus, when normally we would have been studying. However, as he was not then eighteen, he did not spend his time drilling, but worked to lay well the foundation of his college career. As the days and years have gone by, he has always been found "on the job," in the class-room and in every place one expects a real fellow to be. His very strong weakness for those, the fairer sex, has been notable. As a member of the Student Council his position has been one based at all times on the highest conception of Honor and a desire to boost Randolph-Macon.

A man who values truth, stands firm for the right and allows no thwarting of a noble purpose, is very fittingly a description of this, her son, that old Randolph-Macon has prepared for work in the world.

In Mays we have a man who is a consistent worker, a genial companion, a jolly good sport and, in short, a man who has the interest of Randolph-Macon at heart.

He joined our ranks in the troublesome times of war and in the ensueing months devoted himself to military tactics. The aftermath of war had its effect upon him and for some reason or other he let his work slip however, be it said that he realized his predicament before it was too late and in him we have an example of a man who, realizing mistakes in the past, uses the same pit-falls as stepping stones to better things in the future. By diligent application he has come to the finale a well-grounded Senior,

Mays has applied himself especially in the field of Chemistry and judging from his achievements we are led to believe that this will be his chosen field in life.

The men who are united with Henry in the bonds of intimate friendship know that he has a strong emotion for womankind as exemplified in his constant wooing of a certain young lady who lives in the two Virginias. We are led to believe that he will seek a Tiffany as soon as he bids farewell to us in June.

We hate to lose you, but the best of friends must part. May success crown your endeavor! When, on other fields, we meet, let us ever be drawn together by the strong ties established on the old campus.

It was a sad day for Springbank when she saw one of her promising sons take his departure for college. Grave farewells were extended to William by the elders of the town, and many young damsels wiped their eyes to hide the tears that began to form. William, however, had made his decision, and he set out to accomplish his ideals.

Randolph-Macon welcomed this talented young man, and predicted a splendid future for him. He entered into the activities of college life with the zest and earnestness that had always been characteristic of him. His life upon the campus proved that it was his earnest desire to take advantage of every opportunity to develope himself, and to keep high the standards of the college. In the class-room, upon the campus, or wherever he was present, his conduct was that of a gentleman. His frankness, earnestness, and sincerity, mingled with humor attracted the boys to him.

"William, old pal, your appointed race is nearly completed. We shall miss your smiling countenance, but we know you must go where duty calls. 'God speed'."

The first son of Ferrum Training School to enter any college, well may she be proud of him! Out of the hills of Franklin County comes this voice crying:

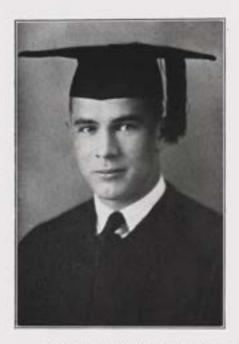

Press on, surmount the rocky steeps, Bling boldly over the torrent's arch, as he goes forth to keep the Ferrum motto "Others" and spend his life in some dark foreign land, that there may be light.

In the fall of 1919, Roy came to us, having spent one year at Vanderbilt University, and in a very quiet way during these three years his influence has radiated over the campus, and he has grown in the popularity of both faculty and students, although he has never worked for popularity.

We shall miss him in Frank Hall, where he has always taken an active part, having been our chaplain three times. In other activities he shall be missed also, for those who knew him best, loved him most.

Be that as it may, we shall gladly follow his career, for we know when he says, "I will," he means it, and we have seen that determination that says, "Press on"—the spirit of a true Yellow Jacket who "will never say die".

HAYES AYRES RICHARDSON, A. B., T K A

This specimen of 'homo omnivora' arrived on the campus in the fall of 1919 from the historic county of James City. He came for the express purpose of twisting professors and—well, a few other things. He has accomplished this purpose in three years by reason of the fact that he handled, with ease, six or seven classes each year. Incidentally, he may be found in the quietness of his chateau with his feet propped upon the radiator and smoking his pipe in peace.

He assumes very often a wise attitude and he can really sometimes create an impression of intelligence. He is a good bluffer, but when it comes to a showdown he's generally in the bouillon.

In all college activities, "Frog", as he is generally known on the campus, is always a participant. He loves Frank Hall and occasionally waxes eloquent, although he is inclined to be an attentive listener. On the baseball diamond he may be found an enthusiastic supporter at all times.

"Frog" has vision of court rooms and "breach of promise suits", and a high-top desk, before which is a revolving chair with himself directing the proceedings.

May his efforts be crowned with success when he takes his place in the world.

Of this man—"Pee Wee", as he is known by all—much can be said. He came here a very green fish, he leaves us as conqueror on the gridiron, a twister in the classroom, a leader in the Christian activities of the campus and a man who by his sterling character and marked ability has won the love of every true man at R. M. C.

The quality of his scholastic ability is shown by his determination to capture the coveted sheepskin in three years. He has been a valuable asset in helping Dr. Fox decorate in blue and red the midnight shaggings of the "current" Freshmen. In this department he is known as "Little Early." His true worth as a man was soon rewarded by his fellow. As president of the "Y" he has been its untiring leader; as an end on the eleven he was ever a power; and, as a perfect gentleman of congenial qualities and high purpose, he excels. The fair dames of Ashland have never led the feet of this Apollo from the stern path of duty and service.

When Capron honors this man in the evening of his life we know that the sun will be setting on a life spent in service of his day and generation.

John Griffith Roberts, more properly known as "Jack", is a leader in college life and is destined to be always a leader in the life of his community wherever he may go. His interests are varied. In every phase of college life; whether it be the social life of the college, the literary halls, the Y. M. C. A., the classes or the tennis court; Jack is always to be found among the leaders. His popularity is shown by the fact that he has the distinction of never having been defeated in a college election. In Frank Hall he has done a large part to mold the policies of that institution, having held every office from marshal to president. Despite the wide range of his talents, his studies have not suffered. In fact he had not been in school long before he became affiliated with that brotherhood known as the "twisters". He special forte is the modern languages in which field he has shown his excellence by gaining the instructorship in French. He took a special course last summer at Middlebury College, Vermont, in order that he might perfect himself in the intricacies of that language. His favorite pastime is "parlez-vousing" with the mademoiselles. Taking all things into consideration, we should say that a more diligent, modest, loyal, and dependable man has never trod the campus of Randolph-Macon.

"Shack, old man", matriculated at Randolph-Macon in 1916, and since that date has established the unusual record of never having completed a full year. However, after each withdrawal from the studious walks and shades of our Alma Mater, he seemed unable to stay away any length of time and finally returned this year for his degree.

Although "Shack" could not be assigned to that category of scholars known in Ashland vernacular as twisters, yet he has made quite a name for himself in Chemistry, having completed four years' study of it with marked success. In recognition of this ability he was given a good position with the Du Pont Dye Works after the war.

In athletics "Scottie" has done exceptionally well. He won letters in all three sports and played on our championship basketball teams of 1918, 1919. The true democratic spirit that dominates his entire being has endeared him to many of the student body and promises to make many friends for him wherever he may go.

History of the Senior Class

N a beautiful September morn in 1918 Randolph-Macon opened her doors to the largest freshman class that has ever sought entrance into the halls of this majestic institution. We numbered one hundred and thirty-eight, and began our college career in a new way, our purpose differing from that of previous classes in that our country needed us. Thus we began as privates in the Student's Army Training Corps instead of assuming the role of "fish." To be called "Fish" seemed bad enough but we soon learned that "buck private" was by far worse; as there was attached to it more duties that the freshmen were usually accustomed to experience. Our work was begun with vigor, every one realizing that to succeed in this movement was but to give the best that was in him. Some of us more fortunate than others attained to the rank of corporals; others, sergeants, while the rest of us applied ourselves daily, hoping for such distinction. Just when we were beginning to feel that we were gaining some knowledge of military tactics, word came that the Armistice had been signed. Our air castles fell! Not that we were regretful of the fact that temporary peace had come, but that we were eager to demonstrate, at least to some extent, our ability to aid our country in our modest fashion. We disbanded in December, not to meet classes until after Christmas holidays.

In January, 1919, fifty-seven of the former one hundred and thirty-eight returned to resume their college career. Understanding the difficulties under which we were to labor, we worked even the harder to accomplish in six months that which in normal times occupies nine. Taken as a whole we were green—yes even ignorant, of the many things which lay before us. The spirit which pervades the old college soon became an integral part of each of us, and we entered with zeal into the many activities. In athletics we won an envied position which we kept throughout our college years, being represented on the Varsity teams of every sport. Five members of this class received the coveted monogram in the first year. Others of our numbers not aspiring to athletics delved into literary activities via literary societies, and secured prominent places. Thus through our perseverence and consistent work, we were able in the end to complete our freshman year in creditable fashion.

The fall of 1919 saw us as Sophomores returning to our work eagerly looking forward to revenge at the expense of the poor "fish." It was our desire to train each freshman in a similar manner to that which had been our lot. Our expectations, however, were short lived, for lothe Faculty required us to pledge ourselves as gentlemen of honor, not to haze the freshmen in any form whatsoever while we were to remain as students of Randolph-Macon. Our class this year numbered fifty-five, some having fallen by the wayside, while others joined our ranks from other schools.

Again, in 1920, we caught up the thread left idle since June, this time, however, with the title of Juniors. A few of our members, through diligent application, forsook our ranks and took the lot of Seniors, while others for one reason or another failed to return. We congratulated the former for their success and sympathized with the latter, who were unfortunate in that they were unable to run with us the race which was now half finished. In this year we came to a real understanding concerning the manner in which a college man should conduct himself, and it was with no little regret that we reviewed our many shortcomings of the previous year. Not that we had gained perfection, but that we aspired to the more serious in life and determined to profit in the future by our past experience. This year passed with surprising rapidity; in fact much too quickly to allow us for the responsibilities that come with the Senior year.

With the third mile post fading in the past, we caught a fleeting glimpse of the final goal when we again commenced our studies in the autumn of 1921. Our number had diminished until little more than a score remained. E'en though we are few in number we look back over our four years with a feeling that we have run a good race and fought a good fight. Visions of the future are before us, and although June will commemorate our passing out from these walls, posterity will but show that we are now and forever loyal sons of Randolph-Macon.

The little that we have accomplished, we owe to those under whom we have labored; for it is by their patience, forethought, and genial assistance that we have secured an impetus towards serving our fellow men in the future. We wish to express our appreciation to the Faculty; and any success which may crown our efforts will but be an indication that they have not labored in vain.

History of the Junior Class

LL Junior classes, as debutante's younger sisters, suffer serious inconveniences. Let the Seniors leave the ranks, and we may again come to the fore. We cannot, as they, regale future generations with our plans of reconstruction, and our ideas concerning the purblind state of a miserable world, nor lament with a pardonable tear the departure from an Alma Mater we love so well.

We have not boast to make; our record of achievement proclaims its own merit. We are doing our part in the vast machinery—and dismiss the rest with a silent toast.

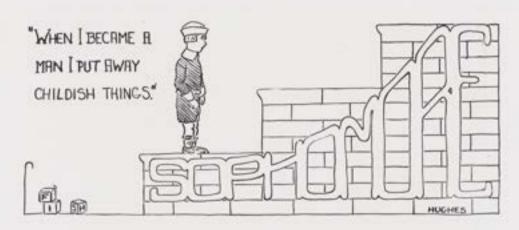

Tennyson, whom we love, has very clearly expressed our creed:

"Our purpose holds, To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths Of all the western stars, until we die."

Yes, our purpose holds to sail beyond the stars, and the glowing sunsets. And leaving the quiet harbor after another glorious year, we will face the more turbulent tides, and keep that gleaming scroll on which our deeds are numbered, as a beacon star shining undimmed upon a watchful world.

HEN Randolph-Macon opened her venerable portals in the fall of 1921, not the least numerous among the comers were the sophomores. Sixty husky ex-freshmen ordered plates reserved for them at their respective boarding houses. Sixty of last year's "fish" have been working with all of their brain-power, since other power is forbidden, to instill school spirit spirit and proper respect for the upper classmen into the minds of the "fish." Seventy-three "fish" have been opposing them with all of their obstinacy. The Sophomore class naturally has a fatherly feeling for the "fish," and wishes to do everything for their good. You have all heard the old saying, "Spare the fishing rod and spoil the fish." The class of '24 believes this to be true.

Not only have the Sophs been foremost in extending courtesies to the freshmen, but they have contributed to all branches of athletics. Five of them earned a right to be knocked about on the football field last year, four of whom are enjoying the same privilege this year. No less than four Sophomores of this year played on the 1921 basketball team. On the baseball team of last year six Sophomores held positions. All of the Soph letter men, with the exception of one, have returned and are going strong. In the tennis tournament, the second place in the singles was won by a Sophomore. Not only has the Sophomore class given to athletics, but it also has furnished an inter-collegiate debator. To crown it all the Murray Medal for Scholarship was awarded to a Sophomore.

It is indeed hard for us to realize the wonderful evolution which has taken place within us since last year. We are no longer "fish," but Sophomores—real human beings. Think of it! What a fall from high school senior to a college "fish," and yet, what a rise from "fish" to Sophomore!

The Sophomore Class has an unusually large percentage of membership for its second year, and as we look backward on our freshmen year with pleasure, so too, we look forward on our coming year with even keener anticipation.

History of the Freshman Class

HEN the ninetieth session of Randolph-Macon College opened in September, 1921, a large number of freshmen were enrolled. It is interesting to know that approximately a half of this number came directly from the farm, while the other half came from the towns and the cities. The class is made up almost entirely of native sons of Virginia; however,

North Carolina, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey and Maryland are represented. There is also one from the distant country of Persia. These boys have come from their homes of people who represent every walk of life.

Although there was apparent rejoicing occasioned by the entrance of the class of '25, the upper classmen out of their years of experience seemed to look down with sympathy on these dreamfilled youths. At that time, we, the "fish," could see no cause for sympathy. We, however, almost immediately began to realize the superior wisdom of the older men, and discovered why they looked on us in such a sympathetic way. When, at the command of the haughty Sophomores, we undertook to row boats on dry land, to make love to light globes, and to answer the thousand of foolish questions asked us, our hearts with one accord turned toward home.

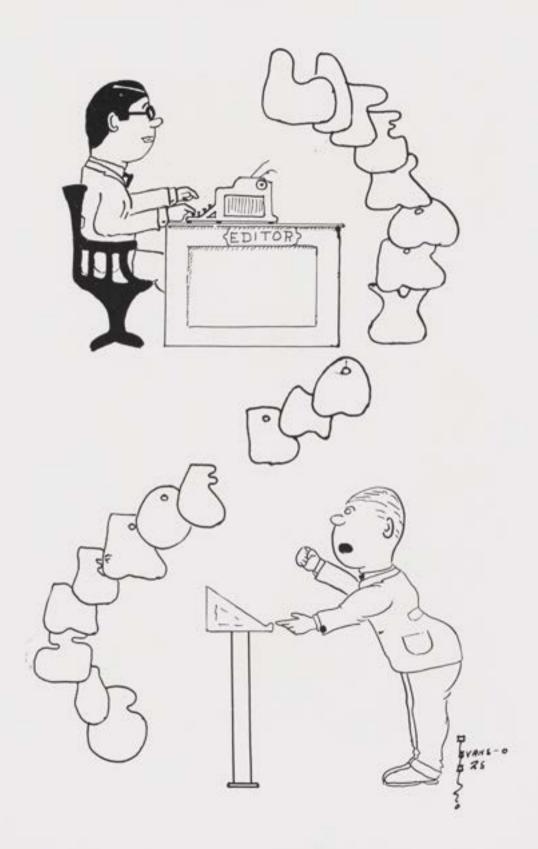

Remembering the many high grades we made previous to entering college, our hopes were soaring, and each one was expecting to take all of the honors. Our air castles were destined to be destroyed. When the marks were finally received each "fish" realized that he was at college and not at high school. We, one and all, being seized with a fearful homesickness, now appreciated greatly the sympathy extended to us by the kindhearted Seniors,

From the first we have given a good account of ourselves in all of the school activities. In the realm of fine arts, Coffey, Smoot, Smethie and Barton composed a quartette of unexcelled musicians. In the social sphere Davis and Stakes have figured promptly. Athletics have not been overlooked. The gridiron has already called for our help. The following men took part in games: Applewhite, Anderson, Bell, Davis and McLemore. We regret to say that George Albert Carpenter, the real football star, was unable to participate in any of the games. Basketball and baseball will also have our attention, and we expect to be represented in these sports. By his power as a debater Smith, W. W., has brought honor to the class; and Morgan, by his famous declamation, has shown that there is a speaker of note within the ranks of the freshmen.

Since our exalted self-esteemed has been duly humbled, there still remains a vision of higher achievement. We have good reason to believe that each member of the class of 1925, in his day, will bring honor to his Alma Mater.

TO OLD K. A.

Where the sweet magnolia blossoms,
And the crimson rose,
Thrive beneath the southern sunshine—
As each K. A. Knows—
There was born our Kappa Alpha,
Dear fraternity;
There her sons will guard her honor
Through eternity.

From the placid Susquehanna
To the Lone Star State,
From the fields of Alabama
To the Golden Gate,
Shines the cross of Kappa Alpha,
Gleaming ever bright,
Emblem of her glorious precepts,
Standing for the right.

When we leave our college campus,
Never to return,
When the cares of life o'ertake us,
Still for her we yearn;
And until Death's sable angel
Calls us to the grave,
We shall praise our well-loved order,
Kappa Alpha brave.

KAPPA SIGMA! HAIL TO YOU!

Kappa Sigma! well-loved mother!
Kappa Sigma! Hail to you!
We are faithful to each other,
All your sons are brothers, too;
Mindful of the oath we swore you,
To our pledges ever true,
Hear us vow again before you
Loyalty to them and you.

Some of us have life before us,
Some of us, alas, behind,
But your precepts still reign o'er us,
And your ties shall ever bind;
A consistent Kappa Sigma
Leads a life that's free from blame;
May we never cause a stigma
To disfigure your dear name.

We all know, O band of brother!
Why we to her doctrines cling;
Let us then proclaim to other
That we've found it a good thing!
To the many an enigma
Guarded by a chosen few,
Kappa Sigma! Kappa Sigma!
Kappa Sigma! Hail to you!!!

PHI KAP NATIONAL ANTHEM

Phi Kaps, Now pledge with me Our dear fraternity. Our hope and pride; May fortune smile on her, May God environ her And be her guide.

Ours are the ties that bind Heart, soul and mind to mind, And Men to men; Stand we in unity. And with hearts glad and free, Phi Kappa Sigma, thee We pledge again.

Now may our future be Like our past history, But greater far; And our fraternity, Crown'd by posterity, Shall in the heavens be The brightest star.

BANDED BROTHERS

Aloud Phi Delta Theta song
We'll raise this starry night;
Come, brothers, join our joyous strain,
And put dull care to flight.
While far away at close of day,
Our loved ones spend the hours,
In joyous mirth, around the hearth;
Let that same bliss be ours.

The bonds that bind our hearts in one,
No power on earth shall break;
But lasting as the hills around,
Our friendship we will make.
On prairie wide, on mountain side,
We left our homes behind;
And in this land, a happy band,
Of friends and brothers find.

When college days are o'er at last,
And scattered far and wide
Upon the rugged sea of life,
Our fragile barks do ride,
A darling boy, our pride and joy,
While years go rolling by;
Beneath our roof, shall learn the truth—
"Tis good to be a Phi.

ODE TO SIGMA PHI EPSILON

Onward, dear brothers,
Wave your royal banners high;
See our colors blazoned
In the sunrise sky.
All thy sons uphold thee;
All now sing with loud acclaim,
Friendship, true and loyal,
In thy holy name.

CHORUS

Onward, dear brothers;
All now sing with glad acclaim,
Sing of love and friendship
In thy sacred name.

Hail, heart that marks us
Sons of thy best truth and right;
Hail, star that calleth
Upward to the light;
At the sign of freedom
We with joy obey thy call;
Sundered by Truth's falchion
Chains of bondage fall.

May thy violets flourish,
And thy roses never fade;
Hope shines before us,
Truth is undismayed:
We are crowned with freedom,
Robed in thy blest purity;
We are loyal brothers
To eternity.

Football Resume

The season of the pigskin came with the first days of autumn, and if numbers had a v a iled, Randolph-Macon would doubtlessly have added a string of victories to her slowly increasing accumulation.

The men reported early and practiced strenuously for days and days, each awaiting the coming of the first game, hoping, yes, even praying, that their chance to fight for the old College would come-

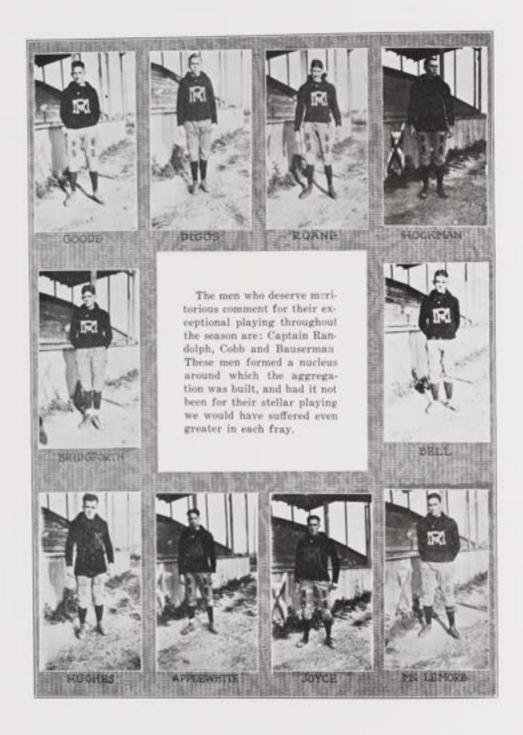

The season opened well, the Jackets holding the mighty North Carolina State to three touchdowns, September 24th, at Raleigh.

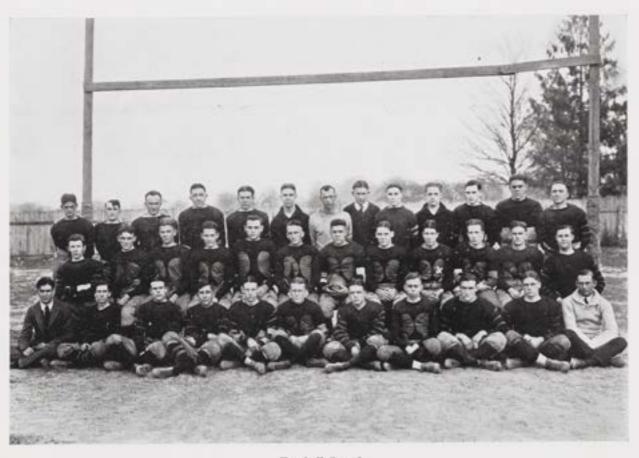

Washington and Lee, Hampden-Sidney, Trinity, William and Mary, and Richmond were met in due season, each but contributing to our list of defeats.

The one game of the season in which our eleven was victorious came November 5th when we met Lynchburg, on Day Field. The game was very interesting to say the least and many were the glad hearts on the campus.

This resumé would be far from complete were we content to say merely that we had a losing team. 'Tis true that we lost six of the seven games scheduled but the man does not live who can say that we did not have one of the cleanest fighting machines in the State. We did not win in scores but we did win in reputation; reputation of the kind which counts!

Resume

The 1922 season opened with great prospects, a goodly number of men reporting for the initial practice, which was called the first week in December by Captain Scott.

Several letter men were to be seen among the eager candidates and this element but added zest to the long weeks of practice preceding the separation of the sheep from the goats,

Never did the loyal sons of Randolph-Macon lose confidence in the quint—not only was pep ever present during the early days but prevailed until the last whistle sounded, and the followers left the gym to seek the diamond.

A large schedule was played with our opponents holding the greater number of victories. The teams meeting the Yellow Jackets during the season were: Richmond Blues, U. S. Royals, Bridgewater College, George Washington University, William and Mary College, University of Richmond, Union Theological Seminary, Hampden-Sidney College, John Marshall Athletic Club, Park View Athletic Club, Wesleyan, and Guilford College.

Possibly the most interesting game of the season came when the Jackets suffered defeat at the hands of Bridgewater College by a score of 18-16; defeat only after two extra periods were played. The game was of the best calibre from start to finish and interest ran high, due no doubt to the fact that this was the first game ever played in the home gym in which more than one extra period was required to break a tie score.

It would indeed be difficult to distinguish between the players, for to say that this or that one was the outstanding light of the quint would be to commit a most grievous error. Suffice it to say that each player committed himself at all times in his best manner, always having the ideals of a true athlete of Randolph-Macon at heart.

We sing no swan song! We suffered defeat, but we suffered it as true sportsmen and our defeats today will but make complete victory more sweet when we again claim the championship of Eastern Virginia.

Introspect

Prospects are good! Never in the history of school has such a large number of candidates reported. Not to anticipate too much, let us be content for the present by acknowledging the fact that the material this year is by far the best seen at Randolph-Macon for many seasons.

Eight of last year's Varsity has returned along with fifteen second-string men. To this number is added a wealth of Freshmen, some of whom have been recognized as "Knights of the Horsehide" in Carolina and Virginia Prep school circles.

Realizing that numerous conditions may arise which will cause different combinations to be put on the diamond, the following is but a prophecy of the 1922 team:

Track Team

We have not lacked material, we have not lacked coaching ability; what we have lacked was interest, and we are glad to report that this branch of sport is beginning to be recognized at Randolph-Macon. For the past two years interest has gradually grown and at the present developments are under way which will soon establish track as an important branch of athletics.

Last spring a day was set aside for track events and much stimulation of the student body resulted. This year a Cross Country team was sent to Atlanta, Georgia, to compete in the Southern Methodist Collegiate Meet, Weaver taking eighth place. This spring a more elaborate meet will be held and participation in intercollegiate meets is expected.

It must be noted that interest is ever increasing in tennis. A few years ago, in fact in the time of the writer, the club seldom had over twenty names upon its roster. Last fall more than forty men were enrolled, and from all indications equally as many will become members for the spring season.

The spring tournament is under way at the present writing, but has not advanced to the extent of allowing prophetic remarks. Manager Roberts reports several good matches scheduled for the winners and it is hoped that R. M. C. will be well represented both at home and abroad,

Parlor Athletics

'Tis evident from the poses struck by the illustrious gentlemen in the likeness above that they either know absolutely nothing about the "love-game" or are trying to fool the girls that kissed them fond farewells last September! Personally, we are firmly convinced that the former is the case, therefore, not wishing to mar their futures, we have withheld their names. If, by any chance you are interested (which we think improbable), to the extent of believing us incorrect in our deductions, you may discover their identities by a further perusal of the pages of this volume—Beware! We have warned you!!

Appreciation

In closing this, the Twenty-fourth Volume of the Yellow Jacket, we wish to express our appreciation, for the aid rendered us in its production, to the author of the Dedication Sketch; to Miss Nellie Duncan, of Warrenton, Virginia, for the frontispiece; to L. L. Drewry, for the kodak work, especially in the athletic section; and to William H. Redd, for the Short Story.

The Miraculous Healer

Down the muddy road, which was just beginning to thaw from the winter freezing, came a carriage of rather costly and fashionable appearance. The vehicle was drawn by two fine horses, driven by an old negro, rather sooty of complexion and of about medium height. The old negro was very fond and proud of the horses, as one could tell by the way he looked at them and talked to them. Indeed he considered the carriage and horses his special charges and would allow no one else to tamper with them on any account if he could help it. The above mentioned articles of humanity, conveyance, and horse-flesh were the property of one Mr. Farrington, a wealthy planter of the Old Dominion during the slave period before the Civil War. These articles were on their way to the stage station to meet their owner, who had for business purposes been to England for a period of three years.

The carriage slashed along through the mud until it reached Terrell's Tavern, the stage station. Having arrived here, the old negro ascended from the carriage, tied the horses to the old cedar hitching rack, and quietly proceeded to await the arrival of his master.

The loneliness of the vicinity was suddenly interrupted by the appearance, around the corner of the inn, of a fat stout lady of amber color. This person bore a basket full of oysters in one hand and a tin pan in the other.

"Howdy, Andrew," says she to the old man, who sat musing in the carriage.

"How is you, Lavinia?", returned Andrew.

"Oh, I is very well considering." Whereupon she seated herself near a big rock and began to demonstrate that her appetite was very well indeed. She began opening the oysters and dropping them in the pan, but not all of them by a long shot, for very many found their way into a cavernous mouth, and were forthwith swallowed at one gulp into the spacious chambers below. In between swallows she addressed the other old darky:

"Well, Andrew, Marse George is comin' home today, and I reckon you is a glad nigger."

Hereupon the conversation was interrupted by the sound of approaching hoofs.

"Here dey comes!" clamored both negroes, straightening up at once.

The stage rolled up to a standstill, and a lady and a gentleman, carrying a young child, alighted from it.

"Howdy, Mistah George, howdy," exclaimed old Andrew. "Lordy, but I'se glad to see you." Uncle Andrew was apparently very excited, and only a sense of humble rank on his part prevented him from embracing his master. "Howdy, Miss Lucy, howdy. Fences seemed ill repaired and almost torn down. Bushes and brambles had grown up on fence rows and in other places where they had no business. The whole plantation had an unkept aspect.

After he had arrived home, Mr. Farrington decided to make the rounds of the plantation. He found the barns and outbuildings, like the fences, out of repair. He also discovered an old horse that was in a bad condition and likely to die. Much of the livestock was also in poor condition as a result of poor feeding and lack of attention. He attributed the general disorder of things to the mismanagement and dishonesty of Johnson, his overseer, and consequently summoned that individual and gave him traveling orders. This human encumbrance being out of the way, he beckoned to a small negro standing nearby, and bade him go fetch all the able bodied negroes, both male and female, who were able to work. The boy, accustomed to offering some excuse when called upon for any form of labor, replied, "Lawdy, Master, how's I gwine to go all 'round dis place lookin' for niggers when my po' old mammy's up dar in de cabin sick? Ain't nobody else up dar and I'se bound to go look arter her."

"Come here, Ebenezer," ejaculated Mr. Farrington, snatching the aforesaid young African by the ear. "You don't seem to be attending to your mammy right now. You just scuttle along and do what I tell you or I'll skin you alive." Ebenezer knew when a man was bluffing and when he wasn't, so, eyes rolling and feet, flying, he scuttled.

As a result of Ebenezer's rounds among the cabins eight negroes answered the summons of their master. There were eighteen grown negroes

"Naw suh," said one young fellow in a meek and gentle voice, "I think they's sick."

"Shuh, dem niggers ain't sick. Dey's just drunk wid laziness," remarked the philosophical Andrew, standing nearby.

"Well, I expect I can cure them," declared Mr. Farrington. "You fellows get all those old broken wagons and all the rest of the rubbish around the barns; bring them here, and pile them up and burn them!" This order was completed by brisk, but not very willing, hands. Mr. Farrington then commanded, "Get all those old broken down horses and sick cows along with the rest of the worthless animals and bring them out here. We'll kill them and drag them away. I'm going to clean up every worthless thing on this place." This not very agreeable task was completed after due course of time.

The next orders were: "Now we've cleaned up almost every worthless thing around here, but there's yet something. Go up yonder and get those sick niggers. They are worthless. I'm going to kill them and drag them away like the horses." Black eyes rolled in amazement, and red lips gaped in horror. "Hustle, or I'll shoot you, too," came the command. The eight started off slowly and silently as if they were dazed. That is, all except Ebenezer, who bolted like a hare to tell his poor sick mammy the sad news. In about five minutes there was approaching the Farrington barn a procession of negroes looking entirely different from that which had left it. Eight well negroes were not bringing the ten sick ones, but were having a hard time keeping up with them. Leading the approaching procession at no slower rate than he had led the departing one was Ebenezer, prodded along with a good hickory by his poor sick mammy, who was beating him for lying to his master.
